

The Disability Integration Act

Over 25 years after the signing of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), institutionalization seriously interferes with the liberty of people with disabilities and seniors. The Senate HELP Committee report “Separate and Unequal: States Fail to Fulfill the Community Living Promise of the Americans with Disabilities Act” documented the failure of States to secure and protect the liberty of people with disabilities and seniors by refusing to provide community-based services. That report recommended that Congress strengthen the ADA integration mandate to clarify that States and private insurers cannot interfere with every American’s right to liberty by failing to provide Long Term Services and Supports (LTSS) in the community.

Summary of Legislation

The Disability Integration Act ensures that people with disabilities have a right to live and receive services in their own homes. The DIA further secures our constitutionally protected right to liberty by preventing disabled people from being forced into costly institutional settings by unnecessary government regulations.

Legislative Approach

The Disability Integration Act (S.117/H.R. 555), introduced by Minority Leader Schumer (D-NY) and Gardner (R-CO) and Representative Sensenbrenner (R-WI), and supported by Senator Jon Tester (D-MT), creates a comprehensive solution, assuring the full integration of disabled people in the community by:

- clarifying that every individual who is eligible for LTSS has a federally protected right to a real choice in how they receive services and supports;
- assuring that states and other LTSS insurance providers deliver services in a manner that allows disabled individuals to live in the most integrated setting, have maximum control over their services and supports, and lead an independent life;
- articulates the right to live in the community without creating unnecessary or wasteful Government programs; States have broad latitude to determine how they will secure that right;
- establishing a comprehensive planning requirement that includes enforceable benchmarks;
- requiring public entities to address the need for affordable, accessible, integrated housing that is independent of service delivery; and establishing stronger, targeted enforcement mechanisms.

Why You Should Support DIA

- It secures the Constitutional right to liberty for millions of disabled people and seniors who are in institutions and want to live in the community.
- It helps aging seniors stay in their own homes.
- It saves millions of Federal and State dollars compared with institutionalization.
- It keeps families together.

Support for this Legislation

This legislation has broad-based support of organizations with over 100 national groups, and over 600 groups in all. It was crafted by ADAPT & the National Council on Independent Living. Key supporters include:

- ACLU
- American Association of People with Disabilities
- Association of University Centers on Disabilities
- Bazelon Center for Mental Health Law
- Brain Injury Association of America
- Center for Public Representation
- DREDF
- Human Rights Campaign
- National Council on Aging
- National Disability Leadership Alliance
- National Downs Syndrome Congress
- National Association of the Deaf
- Paralyzed Veterans of America
- The Arc of the United States
- The Christopher & Dana Reeve Foundation
- United Spinal Association
- Women's March

THE RIGHT TO LIVE IN THE COMMUNITY is logically prior to, and necessary for, the exercise of the rights which the ADA was intended to secure for all people with disabilities.

The lack of adequate community-based services and supports has imperiled the civil rights of all people with disabilities, and has undermined the very promise of the ADA.

It is, therefore, necessary to recognize in statute a robust and fully-articulated right to community living.

This issue has significant untapped public support. In 2010, ADAPT secured a Harris poll assessing public support. The poll showed that 89% of all Americans, and 94% of retirees, support legislation which would require people to get home and community-based supports and services instead of forcing older and disabled Americans into nursing facilities and other institutions.

More information, including the full supporter list, is available at the DIA website: www.DisabilityIntegrationAct.org

Democrats Stand with Americans with Disabilities

The Americans with Disabilities Act guarantees that no one should face discrimination based on their disability. Since the passage of the landmark civil rights law, four presidential administrations have worked to enforce the protections and regulations that ensure equality and inclusion for people with disabilities. However, the Trump administration and congressional Republicans are actively working to strip away the civil rights of disabled Americans by weakening enforcement of the ADA, including gutting the Affordable Care Act, decreasing inclusion in schools for those with disabilities, cutting independent living programs, and reducing job training and workforce accessibility programs.

While Republicans roll back protections for people with disabilities, the Democratic Party is working to expand equal opportunities, increase participation in our workforce, and improve accessibility to independent living for people with disabilities. The right to live in the community is a civil and constitutional right too often denied to Disabled Americans, even though we know that home and community-based services and supports are not only what people want, but are also more cost-effective. That's why Senate Democrats introduced the Disability Integration Act, a bipartisan bill to ensure that no Disabled American is denied their right and opportunity to live freely and independently in the community. This legislation, when enacted, will give people with disabilities who remain in institutions a chance to experience the same dignity and freedom as every other citizen. Democrats are proud to support this landmark civil rights legislation and support the Disability community working to secure its passage.

Democrats will continue our efforts to defend the Americans with Disabilities Act against attacks intended to undercut the rights of people with disabilities, and we will work to ensure that workers with disabilities are no longer denied the workforce protections available to every other American. We support one fair wage for all workers by ending the sub-minimum wage for people with disabilities under Section 14(c) of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Unfortunately, congressional Republicans haven't shown any willingness to stand up for the people they're supposed to represent. In fact, they're making things worse:

The Republican budget would end Medicare and Medicaid as we know them in exchange for corporate tax cuts—while slashing job training and education programs that ensure that people with disabilities have an equal opportunity to thrive.

The House tax plan would trigger automatic cuts to essential programs, including $25 billion from Medicare next year alone.

The GOP tax plan would eliminate the medical expense deduction that millions of people with disabilities and their families use to help with the costs of nursing home care and other very high out-of-pocket health care costs.

The House Republican tax plan would eliminate a tax credit that incentivizes businesses to hire people with disabilities.

The GOP tax plan would eliminate a tax credit that businesses use to retrofit to be more accessible.

The Trump administration recently rescinded education guidelines that detail the rights of students with disabilities in schools.

Democrats are proud to partner with Disabled Activists to fight back against these attacks and for full integration and independence for Disabled Americans.

STATEMENT: CAP's Rebecca Cokley on Endorsing the Disability Integration Act

Date: May 15, 2018

Contact: Kyle Epstein

Email: kepstein@americanprogress.org

Washington, D.C. — Today, the Center for American Progress endorsed the Disability Integration Act, a bipartisan, bicameral bill that would ensure that disabled Americans have the right to live and receive essential services in the comfort of their own homes. Rebecca Cokley, a senior fellow for Disability Policy at the Center for American Progress, issued the following statement in response:

One in five Americans lives with disabilities. Yet, for too long, disability has lived in a silo, separate from broader conversations about progressive policy. CAP is proud to be the first and only progressive think tank with a dedicated disability project. It's why we value our strong partnership with ADAPT and other leaders in the disability community—particularly at a time when President Donald Trump and his colleagues in Congress are advancing policies that would set disability rights back by half a century or more, such as dismantling Medicaid and the Affordable Care Act. And it's why we're proud to be a leader in breaking down silos to ensure that the disability community is at the table and that the progressive community has the disability community's back. Disturbingly, nearly three decades after the Americans with Disabilities Act was signed into law, too many Americans with disabilities are still fighting for the right to live independently, rather than in isolating institutions. This must end. CAP commends ADAPT for its leadership in raising awareness about this injustice and is proud to support the Disability Integration Act.

Bruce Darling, a national organizer for ADAPT, issued the following statement:

CAP has recognized that structural ableism has excluded disabled voices from many policymaking tables. It has actively worked to include people with disabilities in its work and on its staff. We commend CAP for its leadership on this and for their enthusiastic support of the Disability Integration Act, which will ensure disabled Americans are able to live in freedom.

Dear Senators and Representatives,

The 610 organizations undersigned below are civil, disability, human and environmental rights as well as faith based groups who support The Disability Integration Act of 2017 (DIA) (S. 910/H.R. 2472) and request Congress to engage in legislative action and swiftly pass this bill. The DIA is bipartisan, bicameral legislation that would secure the Constitutional right to liberty for millions of Americans with disabilities by ensuring that they have the choice to receive home- and community-based services (HCBS) and supports needed to live an independent life, instead of institutionalization.

For too many years, thousands of people with disabilities have been isolated and segregated in institutional settings, where they lose the opportunity to be full participants in society. This includes children, youth, adults and seniors with disabilities. As the Supreme Court has observed, “confinement in an institution severely diminishes the everyday life activities of individuals, including family relations, social contacts, work options, economic independence, educational advancement, and cultural enrichment,” Olmstead v. L.C. ex rel. Zimring, 527 U.S. 581, 601, 119 S. Ct. 2176, 2187 (1999) and furthermore, institutionalizing people who could live in community settings “perpetuates unwarranted assumptions that persons so isolated are incapable or unworthy of participating in community life.” Olmstead, 527 U.S. at 583, 119 S. Ct. at 2179, (1999).

Even with The Supreme Court’s Olmstead decision, the limited availability of home- and community-based services leave people with disabilities no option but unwanted institutionalization. This prevents them from exercising a right to live where they choose, get an education and participate in everyday life activities such as work, worship and all other things – liberties that are often taken for granted by most non-disabled Americans. In addition to being denied the right to live in the setting of their choice, individuals with disabilities, seniors and their families face unnecessary financial and emotional distress when facing unwanted institutionalization.

The Disability Integration Act would ensure that people with disabilities and seniors who require long term supports and services are able to remain in their homes, stay with their families and continue to contribute to their communities.

We look forward to working with Congress to pass this urgent, important legislation that will prevent many American families from being torn apart because a disabled family member can only receive the supports and services they need in an institution. DIA needs your support, and disabled Americans need you to pass the legislation now.

Dear Senators and Representatives,

We, the undersigned disability rights attorneys, represent a significant cross-section of disability advocates. We have among us, and in some cases individually, decades of experience advocating for the independence and equality of people with disabilities. We are writing in support of the Disability Integration Act, re-introduced in this Congress as S. 910 and H.R. 2472. This important, bipartisan civil rights legislation secures for Americans with disabilities and seniors the Constitutional right to liberty which is promised to all Americans.

The Disability Integration Act builds on the Supreme Court's 1999 decision Olmstead v. L.C., but more than a quarter century after the signing of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) of 1990, and eighteen years after Olmstead, unwanted institutionalization continues to be a serious problem for people with disabilities and seniors. This issue was documented in the HELP Committee report: "Separate and Unequal: States Fail to Fulfill the Community Living Promise of the Americans with Disabilities Act". That report recommended that Congress amend the ADA to clarify and strengthen the law's integration mandate in a manner that accelerates Olmstead implementation and clarifies that every individual who is eligible for LTSS under Medicaid has a federally protected right to a real choice in how they receive services and supports. The report and this recommendation were well received by the Disability Community.

Although the Disability Integration Act does not amend the ADA, the legislation, modeled on the ADA and the ADA Amendments Act, strengthens Olmstead's integration mandate and creates federal civil rights law which addresses the civil rights issue that people with disabilities who are stuck in institutions cannot benefit from many of the rights established under the ADA. It not only enshrines in Federal statute the right to live in the community which Olmstead recognized, it takes what disability advocates have learned over the past eighteen years and creates another more powerful tool to effect the integration of people with disabilities.

We call on you as members of Congress to pass the Disability Integration Act and to call for the President to sign it into law.

Thank you,

Steve Gold, JD.

Re: Support of Disability Integration Act of 2017, S.910; H.R. 2472

Dear Leaders McConnell and Schumer, Speaker Ryan and Leader Pelosi:

The undersigned member organizations of the Consortium for Citizens with Disabilities (CCD) are writing to reiterate our support of the Disability Integration Act (S. 910, H.R. 2472). This legislation, if passed, would ensure the rights of people with disabilities to live full and independent lives in their communities.

CCD is a coalition of national organizations working together to advocate for federal public policy that ensures the self-determination, independence, empowerment, integration, and inclusion of the approximately 57 million children and adults with disabilities in all aspects of society.

The undersigned organizations endorse the Disability Integration Act's goals of ensuring that millions of Americans with disabilities have access to services they need to live in the community and of removing the institutional bias in critical Federal programs. This bill builds on the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Supreme Court's Olmstead decision, and asserts that people with disabilities have a right to live in their own homes and communities and to receive the services and supports they need to do so.

For too many years, thousands of people with disabilities have been isolated and segregated in institutional settings, where they lose the opportunity to be full participants in society. As the Supreme Court observed in Olmstead v. L.C., "confinement in an institution severely diminishes the everyday life activities of individuals, including family relations, social contacts, work options, economic independence, educational advancement, and cultural enrichment,”¹ and furthermore, institutionalizing people who could live in community settings “perpetuates unwarranted assumptions that persons so isolated are incapable or unworthy of participating in community life.”²

While we have made progress in recent years in expanding home and community-based services for individuals with disabilities, many thousands of people with disabilities remain in institutional settings when they could and should have the opportunity to live, work, and receive services in their own homes and communities. The Disability Integration Act would complement the ADA and accelerate the pace of people with disabilities leaving institutions, including by describing with specificity steps that must be taken by states and providers of insurance covering long-term services and supports to achieve community integration.

We urge Congress to pass the Disability Integration Act (S. 910; H.R. 2472) and affirm the right of people with disabilities to live independently and be full participants in their communities. Dear ADAPT Community:

The Service Employees International Union (SEIU) supports the Disability Integration Act (S.910/HR.2472), bi-partisan, bi-cameral legislation that ensures full community integration for Disabled Americans.

More than 25 years after the signing of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), individuals with disabilities who need long term services and supports continue to face barriers to community integration. Americans with disabilities must not be denied the option to receive services and supports they need to live independently and as active members of their communities.

As a union representing hundreds of thousands of home care workers, we know first-hand that the availability of an adequate workforce is essential to ensuring that individuals with disabilities have the choice to receive services and supports in their homes and community. For that reason, we especially appreciate recognition that the failure to establish adequate payment rates and structures for the home and community based workforce, including home care workers, creates barriers to our shared goal of community integration.

SEIU supports the Disability Integration Act and urges Congress to move forward with passing this important civil rights legislation for Americans with Disabilities.

Sincerely,
